The editorial board of Rethinking Marxism welcomes submissions of articles, shorter essays, reviews (of books and events), and visual art that relate to and expand the boundaries of Marxian discourses. In addition, we encourage correspondence on material published in past issues; if comments are accepted for publication, we will make every effort to give authors the opportunity to reply in the same issue.

Submissions to RM are refereed. They will be acknowledged upon receipt, and contributors usually receive the editorial board's decision within three months. We cannot consider submissions currently under review with another journal.

Length

In general, articles (including essays in the globalization series) should be no more than 7000 words, essays for the art/iculations series 1500-4500 words, Remarx essays 3000 words or less, and reviews 500-1000 words.

Checklist

- manuscript formatted in Word (not PDF)
- abstract
- email address of corresponding author

Detailed guidelines on preparing manuscripts for publication in RM are available as an attachment at <http://rethinkingmarxism.org/cms/files/RM-Author%20guidelines.pdf>.
