

ReMarx Call for Papers

The ReMarx section of the journal Rethinking Marxism invites submissions on ongoing Marxian praxis, both anticapitalist and postcapitalist, which could be reflections on the difficulties encountered and also on the possibilities engendered in such practice.

The ReMarx section also hosts:

- (i) Reflections on other kinds of activism (planetary, for example, and those that explore the overdetermined interstices of race, caste, gender, indigeneity, nature, etc. with the question of class) that could contribute to an expanded rethinking of Marxism,
- (ii) Interviews with thinker-practitioners-activists on hurdles, pitfalls, trajectories in Marxian praxis,
- (iii) Roundtables on recent publications from a praxis perspective,
- (iv) Debates on pressing and urgent issues in Marxian struggle, both theoretical and practical.

Scholars and activists are urged to submit their completed contributions to ReMarx (preferred length is 2500 to 3500 words) through the Editorial Manager submissions portal: <https://www.editorialmanager.com/rmx/default.aspx>. If you have an idea for possible interviews, roundtables, or debates, you may contact the ReMarx section editors at remarx@rethinkingmarxism.org